

MAKING WAVES

Nearly two years in the making, HOLLY HUNT's latest debut is the 25-piece Moray collection. Items such as the Pelican dining chair, the Manta Ray daybed and the Reef dining table evoke the ocean, and many of the pieces are composed of bronze and silver woven over aluminum frames. Movement and fluidity come from the deceptively simple lines and modern fabrications, making the outdoor collection perfect for land lovers too.

From $1,900, 1025 N. Stemmons Freeway, Ste. 590, Dallas; 5120 Woodway Drive, Atrium 1, Houston, hollyhunt.com

SOFT LANDING

Celebrated for its exquisitely designed wool and silk rugs, Tai Ping's new Yacht collection has transformed the brand's artisan creations into weatherproof floor coverings that look equally magnificent indoors or out. Although it has offered outside rugs in the past, the company's innovative Field yarn—a high-performance material developed for all-weather application—has taken the category to the next level with its soft hand- and matte-luster and cottonlike appearance. All styles are made-to-order and completely customizable. Coalescent II rug, to the trade, by Jeff Leatham for Tai Ping, 1025 N. Stemmons Freeway, Ste. 310, Dallas, houseoftaiping.com

ASK THE EXPERT

What's the most important factor to consider when designing an outdoor kitchen?

"Durability is always a priority when designing outdoor kitchens. Exposure to the elements can deteriorate materials quickly; as a result, outdoor kitchens often have a sterile material palette. When designing these kinds of spaces, we incorporate elements that are not only durable but also add warmth to the space.

We want to design a kitchen that is both functional and inviting."

Camille U. Jobe and Ada I. Corral, Jobe Corral Architects, 505 W. 38th St., Ste. 1A, Austin, jobecorral.com